About SfRBM

Established in 1987, the Society for Redox Biology and Medicine (SfRBM) is a professional organization comprised of over 1,200 scientists, researchers and clinicians investigating redox biology, a unifying theme in the pathophysiology of human diseases. SfRBM is the North and South American affiliate chapter of the Society for Free Radical Research International.

SfRBM fosters a balanced approach to understanding both the advantageous and the deleterious properties of free radicals, active oxygen species and related oxidants and reductants. We promote mechanistic approaches to the chemistry of both harmful and helpful oxygen species and the consequences of their actions in biology and medicine.

SfRBM provides educational programs for both the lay and scientific communities, catalyzes new research and promotes professional development. The society also provides an environment for the exchange of information and technology to promote scientific excellence.
